

ABSTRACT

Approaches for providing location information in conjunction with a web site and/or web page include, for one aspect, automatically providing location information indicating a location of a computing system in response to receiving
5 a web page. For another aspect, location information may be embedded in a web site or web page and provided to a client computing system that may include, for example, a location-enhanced browser.